EDITOR'S NOTE—This issue's special section originated in papers presented in March 2007 at NYU's Ranieri Colloquium in Ancient Studies. Entitled “Herodotus Now: The Personal and the Political,” the conference was co-sponsored by NYU's Center for Ancient Studies and Steinhardt School of Culture, Education, and Human Development. Special thanks are due to Salvatore Ranieri and to the Hellenic Parliament and the Hellenic Ministry of Culture for their generous support.
